The Meaning of Life Marshall Brain

Human beings are an accidental species - one out of millions of evolved species - living on a tiny speck of a planet in a gigantic universe whose size is incomprehensible. This is our reality. It would be easy to infer that our lives have no meaning in such a reality, but this is untrue. Human beings are unique in our ability to create meaning. Therefore, each one of us is able to create meaning in our own lives. We can give our lives meaning in several different ways. In addition, if we chose to do so together, we can create meaning for our species as a whole. This short book explores the creation of meaning in human lives and the human species.
