The Science of Personal Dress Complete Study Irene Riter

After 40 years as one of the early pioneers of color analysis, Irene Riter presents this updated second edition of the science of color analysis, body analysis and face analysis exhibited by nature's lines and color templates. The intent of this work is to provide "the box of crayons" for everyone (men, women and children) to use and apply to the art of personal dress. This study goes beyond the limiting 4 seasons to reveal "balanced" Inter-seasons. Thus, solving the problem that has caused so much confusion in color analysis. Her research expands into the equally important science of body shapes and clothing lines. This highly illustrated 309-page work is the culmination of the 90-hour required foundation color and line course Irene taught for the prestigious Academy of Art in San Francisco. Organizing colors, hair colors and eye colors into vibrational harmonic sequences of color was "key" to the success of this work making it a classic training manual in this field. The concepts and principles are proven valid because they are based on "The Law of Attraction" which forms the root of all creative art endeavors. Students say it is like "breaking a secret code or learning a foreign language!" Suggestion: Because of the size of this book, it is suggested that for in-depth study that for a nominal charge you can have the perfect spine of the book rebound into a comb binding so that it lays open for easy handling. Highly recommended: Because face analysis is so important to dress and has generally been overlooked, it is an area of personal analysis that needs even more in-depth study which is covered in the latest book, The Universal Language of FACE ANALYSIS offered on Amazon. This study is based on validated scientific research showing that the structure of something defines its automatic function; just as a ball will roll because it is round. Based on universal archetype lines and shapes, a face communicates through facial traits and is felt and known on some level by others. These inherent traits are so common that references to them are used in our everyday language with terms such as "a nose for news," "highbrow," "thin-skinned," "level-headed," and having an "ear for music." All aspects of life are communicating, and the selection of clothing lines is an extension of how we express ourselves. Free Face Analysis classes are offered at www.scienceofdress.com. Printing costs of large color layouts necessitate the reproduction of colors to be slightly less than optimal, but the eBook version of this book allows pure color reproduction that is thrilling to work with in addition to the ease of this printed practical study format as well. If you order and study this complete work, Irene will personally ensure you align with your correct color and line categories. There is a wonderful exam that follows the study and is fun to take for thorough understanding. For additional support you are welcome to contact Irene through www.thescienceofpersonaldress.com for more information on eBooks, materials, personal color and keysize testing tools. PS Irene is a Certified Graduate of The American School of Protocol, Atlanta, Georgia, and her latest book, "The Vivid Beauty Manners, Charm and Etiquette for Women and Girls" revised 6x9 edition is a delightful handbook for vital charming social exchange based on kind respect and love.
