No One Understands You and What to Do About It: Summary of the Key Ideas - Original Book by Heidi Halvorson Evolvo

People commonly assume that others see them the way they see themselves, but a person's perception can be influenced by a number of biases or stereotypes, often without them being aware of it. To avoid giving the wrong impression, you need to understand the science of perception and find out how to send the right signals.

Who should read this book:

- Anyone who wants to make a good first impression or correct a bad one.
- People in powerful positions who have to be able to make accurate judgments.
- Anyone interested in learning more about the science of perception.

In this summary:

Chapter 1: The science of perception is more complex than most of us assume

Chapter 2: The majority of people are cognitive misers and try to make fast judgments

Chapter 3: Perception happens in two phases and most of us get stuck in phase 1

Chapter 4: Entering phase 2 requires a lot more mental energy

Chapter 5: The trust lens: determine whether someone is a friend or a foe

Chapter 6: The power lens: getting more power can change how you perceive others

Chapter 7: The ego lens: avoid making the perceiver feel threatened

Chapter 8: Some people are promotion-focused, while others care more about preventing risks

Chapter 9: The three attachment styles: secure, anxious, avoidant

Chapter 10: How to prevent misunderstandings and make a good impression

Chapter 11: Final Summary
