We Did It forms part of a global intention to restore order and balance to our planet Earth that seems desperately in need of healing. It speaks to the deeper contours of our human awareness and challenges everyone to elevate to higher levels of consciousness; to operate effectively at the level of expected dominion and to embrace the challenges of personal responsibility needed in order to make the world a better place for all of humanity. We Did It is a purposeful review of a life's journey. It delves deeply beneath the core tapestry of some of the greatest challenges of its generation, including homosexuality and HIV/AIDS, and appropriately offers an opportunity for the cleansing process of restoration, tolerance and transcendence. We Did It is about promoting peace, about love; it is about attaining your highest expectation and uncovering possibilities as productive co-creators on the planet. A positive response is likely to make manifest an evolution with greater understanding and offers the promise of a journey back to perfect alignment with source: life, love, and nature; a resulting brotherhood and an awakened oneness of spirit in a very diverse and complex world that now must learn to co-exist both peacefully and consciously for its own survival.
