Dogman: Michigan, Wisconsin, West Virginia George Dudding

First, it was the Mothman and the Men in Black, then Sheepsquatch, and now the author has just learned of another new creature, originally known for inhabiting Michigan and Wisconsin, has been seen around his hometown of Point Pleasant, West Virginia. Is there no end to the madness which has manifested itself in that historic old river town? The author, George Dudding, decides that he must return to Mason County to check out this new mysterious happening. Once there, he finds that Dogman has chosen the area to begin marking out his territory. After his investigation is complete, he finds himself drawn to the southern coalfields of McDowell County, West Virginia where he finds that a similar creature is wreaking havoc upon the good citizens of Sandy Huff Hollow Road.
